次の英文を読んで、1 から 4 の問いに答えなさい。

One morning when Aya and Kaito were walking to school, Kaito saw a group of people in a park. He said to Aya, "Look! They are cleaning the park." Aya looked at the group and said, "That looks like volunteer work. I'm not really interested in that." Kaito said, "We can do many things for other people. I think volunteer work is one of ① them. So, you should think about it a little." "Well, do you do anything for other people?" said Aya. "Yes, I sometimes join those people when they do volunteer work. Oh, school will start soon," said Kaito. They ran to school.

The next Saturday, Aya went out after breakfast. She was walking through the park, and she saw the same people again. Aya talked to two women. They were collecting trash and cans in a plastic bag. "Hello. My friend and I saw you here a few days ago. Do you often come and clean this park?" "No, not often. Only twice a month," one woman answered. Aya asked, "Do you have to clean this park?" "Oh, no. ② We just want to. We collect trash and cans, and sometimes take care of the flowers and plants, too. We like this park," said the other woman. They smiled and went back to the group.

Aya looked around the park. Some little children were playing, and the trees and flowers were beautiful. Aya thought, "③." She ran to the group and said, "Excuse me! Do you have another plastic bag?"

Did you smile or laugh today? Do you often smile at your family, friends, or people around you? One study shows ① an interesting result. Children laugh about four hundred times every day but adults laugh only about fifteen times every day. How about you? If you don't usually smile or laugh a lot, please remember this. Smiling and laughing help us greatly.

There is a wonderful story about the power of laughing. About fifty years ago, a man who lived in America became very sick. He couldn't move at all and was in bed in the hospital. ② It was difficult for him to sleep because he was very sick. His doctor didn't know how to cure him. So, the man decided to do it by himself.

In the hospital, he read a book. It was about people's way of thinking and their bodies. Then he thought, "If I feel happy, I can cure myself." So ③ he decided to do some things every day. One of them was to laugh. He read funny stories and watched funny movies. After laughing, he could sleep. He became better. Some months later, he got out of bed and began to work again. Laughing was really good for him. And some years later, he began to work at one of the most famous universities in America. He taught the power of laughing there.

Smiling and laughing are good for our (④). Doctors and scientists have shown that this is true. Then, what happens in the body when we smile or laugh? Our body is made of about 60 trillion cells. In our body, about three thousand bad cells are born every day, but five billion good cells which we always have in our body break up bad cells. One test shows that the good cells become active when we laugh. The experiment was done by two doctors in Japan in 1992. They asked nineteen people to see a very funny show for three hours in a theater. Before and after the show, the doctors checked how the good cells in each person became active. And they found that the good cells became more active after the show. One of the doctors said, "Let's laugh! But if you can't laugh, just smile. Smiling is also good for the good cells in your body."

Smiling is also good for our (⑤). When we are happy, our brain releases hormones. So, we feel good and positive. When we are very sad or when we are in the difficult situation, what should we do? Smiling is very important in such a situation, too. Let's smile even if we are very sad. And our brain will believe that we are happy. Then our brain will release happy hormones. Smiling makes us happy.

Do you smile every day? Smiling is usually a small thing in our daily life. But sometimes it is very important. It has the power to change you. ⑥ It also has the power to change the people around you. Smiling spreads from person to person. So, let's smile.

(注) cure = 治す trillion = 1 兆 cell = 細胞 brain = 脳 release = 分泌する, 放出する
hormone = ホルモン daily = 日々の

Girl: Good afternoon, everyone. I'm Hitomi. Today, I want to talk about the club activity.

I joined the brass band club when I entered junior high school, and now I'm in my third year. At first, I wasn't good at playing the flute, but the other members helped me practice. Thanks to them, I can play the flute better and I enjoy performing music now.

When I was in the second grade, a girl from Canada joined our club. Her name is Mary. She also played the flute. I didn't know how I should communicate with her because I wasn't very good at English then. But her music changed my mind. She was a very good player and her flute moved me. I thought I could talk with her through music. She has been my best friend since then. This experience taught me that we can communicate through not only language but also music. Thank you for listening!
